“Digital Society and Law” Joint PhD Conference

The Institute for Legal Studies of the Centre for Social Sciences and the Department of Private International Law of the University of Szeged Law School jointly announce the “Digital Society and Law” PhD conference.

The emergence of the digital space has presented many new challenges to all fields of law. Ranging from jurisdictional and conflict of laws issues arising from digitally arranged contractual relationships, questions concerning the regulation of digital platforms, various consumer protection issues, the regulation of fintech, to many more questions. The purpose of this conference is to provide space for PhD students as well as young researchers to share their findings and present their own perspectives on how digital society affects their particular research topic.

The conference will be held online, on December 14, 2022. We would like to ask applicants to submit the title of their presentation and their abstract (no more than 500 characters without spaces) by December 8. Confirmation of the applications will be sent by December 10. The exact schedule will be transmitted to the participants by December 12.

Please submit your abstracts and titles to the organizer, Dr. Gábor Hajdu (Hajdu.Gabor2@tk.hu) with the following subject: “Digital Society and Law” application. Please also include your affiliation.
